Allan Alfonso, P.Eng., believes that if channelled properly, a deep understanding of technology will allow one to make better business decisions. A computer engineer, Allan knows the complexities behind routers and Internet technology inside and out, and has Cisco certification in networking and design. He is currently pursuing his Master of Business Administration degree at the Richard Ivey School of Business.

His technical training, in combination with his newly acquired business skills, will allow him to become a technology strategist. Ultimately, Allan would like to work for a large global technology company or consulting firm, and become what he calls a “thought leader” – someone who leverages education and experience to become recognized for innovative technology ideas and business models.
